Themes – an idea or message that runs throughout the story

Relationships

The story explores the deep and lasting relationships between a horse and his rider. Joey and Albert form an emotional bond from the very beginning, and each demonstrates his commitment, loyalty and love to the other.

Michael Morpurgo also explores similar relationships between the artillery horses and soldiers of both sides through Joey's description of them.

The Futility of War

When war is announced, the hopelessness of war is discussed when the villagers talk about the loss of young men on the front line. During his time in France, Joey sees soldiers on both sides and believes there is not much difference between them and that they do not really understand why they are fighting. This is shown in the story when both sides work together to free Joey from the barbed wire, and then go back to fighting – they are not true enemies but fight because of their situation.
